During the Battle of Wilson's Creek, General Nathaniel Lyon became the first Union general to die in the Civil War. His monument was first erected in the public square, before being moved to Springfield National Cemetary, where it is found today.